MURDERER TERRELL TAKEN FROM THE JAIL AT BLUFFTON.

He Killed His Son-in-Law Last May-Elwood Enforces Curfew Ordinance -Judge Shively to Retire.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. BLUFFTON, Ind., Oct. 19.-John W. Terrell, in jail here for the shooting of his son-in-law, Melvin Wolf, last May, was taken from jail this afternoon, in charge of Sheriff Johnson and a deputy, and escorted to the site of Bluffton's $35,000 opera house, now being erected.

Mr. Terrell furnished $10,000 capital toward the building, and it has been named the Terrell Grand Theatre. The object in allowing him to visit the building to-day was that he might lay the cornerstone. He was permitted to make a general inspection, and was watched by a curious crowd of 200 or 300 persons.

The cashier of a hotel must be as shrewd and discriminating as the credit men of a great mercantile establishment, and he must be far more liberal in his estimate of missed in the Sangamon Circuit Court this | character. The cashing of checks is his most important duty. These are presented by men from all parts of the world, most of them utterly unknown to him. To refuse to honor a request for money on a draft is to make a mortal enemy of a patron. To demand identification is to embarrass and offend him. One of the firstrate hotels in this city is losing patronage daily because its cashier cannot tell the difference between an honest man and

He swears elected, and is expected to accept. He is a as he calls it. His extensive acquaintance is a good thing for the house, as crowds call on him daily and spend money. He tells everyone he meets about the "fool cashier who doesn't know an honest man from a thief," and he is likely to spread the story of his treatment throughout the

There are two cafes in the financial district where hundreds of checks are cashed daily, the aggregate reaching many thousands of dollars. One of them we shall call B. P. and the other F. E. A broker with car fare drops in at B. P.'s for a toddy, meets sixteen friends and treats. No funds. Drawing a check for $10 he asks that it be cashed. He has spent $3,000 in the place in two years. The proprietor hems and haws. "I'm afraid I'm a little short just now. Just sent all my available cash to the bank. How much is the check?" He fingers the till nervously. "Why, man, it's only $10. Frightened, eh? Well, sir, I wouldn't let you cash another check for me to save your soul from the turkey buzzards. George"-turning to an acquaintance-"lend me $200." The man addressed hands out two $100 bills. "Two thousand if you like." "No, thanks. Here is a fellow too mean to cash a $10 cheek. I'm done with him." Over at F. E.'s the same g-ntleman happens to be short after a strenuous day, and for driving away devils and dissolving must have a few dollars. He could draw a check for $500,000 and have it certified. He draws one for $25 and says to the proprietor, 'Cash a small check for me?" Before replying orally the proprietor pulls out the of ligneous structure; at the same time till, picks up a stack of $20 bills and begins to count them out one by one with bank-teller rapidity. years rolled by, jet became popular on ac-ers, who fashioned it into the most elaborate brooches, necklaces, earrings, pendset in gold and sometimes surrounded by diamonds and other precious stones, so that a brooch would retail for hundreds of pounds sterling. Paper knives, watch charms, and an infinite variety of articles followed, and at length it became popular to wear jet for mourning. At the first glance, jet looks like polished black glass, but the merest novice can detect its peculiar beauties upon a closer examination.

It so happens that jet has never been found anywhere in England except in the precipitous cliffs overlooking the sea, on which the quaint old seaport of Whitby stands. The chief industry of Whitby for hundreds of years was the manufacture of jet, and then some seven hundred years ago part of the inhabitants took to fishing and whaling, and the picturesque old seaport has ever been the home of a prosper-in any part of Europe the Whitby merchants would immediately send a box of jet mourning by express to the bereaved family. Such jewelry as was kept was paid for PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 19.-In a desperate struggle with his keeper Thomas Hartley, one of the inmates of the "Bad ward" at the Bartonville Asylum received injuries from which he died this morning. The struggle arose while he was being transferred from a ward on the second floor to one on the first and for a time after beating off his guards the man ran amuck in the corridors to the peril of the other inmates. His home was formerly at Elgin.

Bandits Terrorise a Town.

NEWBURG, Ore., Oct. 19.—For two hours this morning this place was prac-tically under control of a gang of bandits whose object was to blow up the building of the bank of Newburg and loot the vault. Though several charges of dynamite were exploded the steel vault failed to give way and the bandits departed on horseback toward Portland. The vault contained probably $20,000. The building was practically wrecked.
